POLICE RAID HOUSE ON HAYES STREET; ARREST WOMAN

Find 50 Bottles of Homebrew and Alcohol On the Premises

5-GALLON CAN HIDDEN

Chief Jones Moves Dog Box and Finds Hiding Place

Chief Jones and two patrolmen raided 244 Hayes street, Saturday afternoon after receiving numerous complaints about the place.

The officers walked into the house which is to all intents and purposes a private dwelling. They found one man drinking and another man, claiming to be the husband of the woman who owns the property, in the house at the time.

Pauline Kysnaik, the alleged proprietress, was not at home at the time. She was taken into custody this morning, however, and after a hearing held in $800 bail for a further hearing.

Officers found 50 bottles of homebrew, 2½ gallons of alcohol, another half-gallon of alcohol and a quart jug partly filled.

Discovery of the five gallon can half filled with alcohol came about in an unique way. Chief Jones was looking the premises over when his attention was attracted to a suit case in a dog house in the rear yard. He pulled out the suit case and in so doing moved the dog box and found a board underneath which covered a hole in the ground in which was the five-gallon can.

SONS OF ITALY DEDICATE HANDSOME NEW HALL

Judges, Senator and Other Distinguished Men Attend Exercises

FLAG RAISING FEATURES

Flag raising and dedication ceremonies marked the opening of the new hall of the Sons of Italy, Wood street, yesterday. The ceremonies were attended by a number of distinguished men including a State Senator, judges and those prominent in fraternal circles.

The new home of the Sons of Italy is located on Wood street in the Sixth Ward and is a commodious building 73 feet by 21 feet with an extension 20 feet by 14 feet with a large finished basement underneath.

Anthony Russo was the spokesman presenting the flag which was accepted by Angelo DiRenzo, chairman of the committee. Buglers from Robert W. Bracken Post, No. 382, American Legion, sounded the usual salute as Old Glory floated to the breeze from the top of the staff. Hundreds of small flags floated to the ground.

St. Ann's Troop, Boy Scouts, gave exhibition drill under the direction of John Field and made a very creditable showing.

The building was blessed by the Rev. Marcellini Romagno, rector of St. Ann's Church.

"THINGS WHICH ARE SEEN ARE TEMPORAL, BUT THINGS WHICH ARE NOT SEEN ARE ETERNAL," IS REV. BOSWELL'S BACCALAUREATE SERMON THEME

Bristol High School Graduates, Members of Faculty and Board of Education Attend Sunday Morning Service at St. James's Episcopal Church

The young men and young women who tomorrow night will receive diplomas showing they have successfully completed the four-year course of study at Bristol High School attended the morning service in St. James's Episcopal Church, yesterday, where Rev. George E. Boswell, rector, delivered the baccalaureate sermon. Members of the board of education and high school faculty were likewise in attendance.

The sermon, based on Second Corinthians, 4:18, "The things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are not seen are eternal," follows:

No one who is present here this morning needs to be told how much of his or her equipment to face life has been acquired by mere observation. We live in a scientific age, an age in which everything is carefully analyzed, and labeled and classified. Scientists have observed innumerable facts about the physical universe in which we live, and their disciples have noted them down in text books, so that scientific observations are now the common property of all seekers after truth.

The basic principle of all life, of course, is the seeking after truth, truth about everything in the world in which we live. And the observations which have been made by the scientists are solid facts, which in many cases are extremely interesting and in every case essentially useful. The fact of the matter is, we can hardly imagine how modern life could be lived without the knowledge which has come through the observation of laws of causes and effects. Unless our engineers knew with certainty the principles of stress and strain, and the effects of dynamic force, machinery, which has so revolutionized industry and modern living, would be utterly useless. Unless electricians had mastered something of the properties of electricity, we would have no radio, or wireless, or electric light. Unless our doctors had mastered medicine, we would have no cure for fatal diseases, and so on. Scientists, and doctors, and philosophers and engineers are all wonderful people, and have made wonderful contributions to the world. And yet, it seems to me, they miss much, for there are values in life which do not submit to observation. In fact, all the real things of life are unseen. St. Paul says, the things which are seen are temporal, and the things which are not seen are eternal. I think if he were living today, he would say, the things which are not seen are the real things.

The scientists can tell us the facts of life, what it is composed of, its constituent parts and so on, but they cannot tell us the meaning of life, and the all-important question that faces every one of us, is not how we live, but why we live; not how we die, but why we die; not how we think, and feel and suffer, and smile and sacrifice and serve, but why we do all these things and many more.

Why do we live, what is the purpose of our lives, what really makes life worth living with all of its hardships and privations and sufferings. To answer these questions, we must look to another realm; a realm that is higher than the realm of science.

Human life is indeed a great privilege, and the longer we live the greater the privilege becomes. The more one reflects about why we live, the more conscious he becomes of his responsibility to the world, for all privilege involves responsibility. And to face life nobly, to acquire a fair measure of success, which is the aspiration of every sane individual, something more than knowledge is needed.

The scientist has knowledge. He bases all his theories on facts which can be proved or disproved. But there are facts about life which cannot be proved, but which are more real than those on which the scientist bases his authority. The great realities of life are unseen and unprovable but which nevertheless are real and vital. For example, truth, goodness, purity, in short all the virtues which constitute manhood, do not come from observation, nor can they be proved.

It is, I think, quite significant that today in America is Flag Day. The American flag is more, infinitely more, than so much bunting or silk put together in a certain way, so as to have red and white stripes of a given number, and a blue field with white stars in it. The American flag symbolizes to the world American manhood, with all the unseen virtues, such as courage and purity and honesty and high sense of honor that constitute the ideal and true American.

The cross which symbolizes Christian manhood is more than two pieces of wood or brass put together into a certain shape. It stands for the ideal which Jesus Christ eternally holds before all men and women. And the business of being a Christian is by no means easy. Perhaps some of you have read that remarkable and arresting book, "Larry, Thoughts of Youth," a book by the way which every American youth ought to read. In that book, Larry, a young American boy, describes the business of being a Christian as no mollycoddle idea, but a red-blooded, two-fisted, daring scrap from start to finish. How utterly true. St. Paul is right, the real things of life, the things which make life worth living, are the unseen and the best in life, and can never be obtained without religion, or faith in God.

The secret of happiness in human life, and by happiness I mean the all-compelling inspiration to live our very best at all times, lays in the religion of Jesus Christ. It does not matter very much whether He was born of a virgin or not. I firmly believe he was; nor does it matter whether he performed all the miracles such as healing the sick and raising the dead and so on, and again I believe He did all those things, but the big thing to me is He lived life here on earth, that He (Continued on Page 2)

DIPLOMAS, MEDALS, PINS AWARDED AT ST. MARK'S

Honors Are Conferred by Rev. Father Joseph E. Murphy, Saturday

THIRTEEN GRADUATE

The commencement exercises and annual entertainment by the pupils of St. Mark's School, were held on Saturday afternoon in St. Mark's auditorium, when a class of thirteen young men and women was graduated from that institution.

The members of the class were: Francis Bellesi, Francis Joseph McGee, Catherine Mary Armstrong, Mary Elizabeth Clardy, Rita Marie Ferry, Genevieve Catherine Finney, Rose Catherine Flanagan, Marie Magdalen McGonigle, Grace Theresa Murphy, Edith Amelia Potena, Catherine Gertrude Roarty, Lena Verratti, and Mary Elizabeth Williams.

The program consisted of recitations and songs by the several classes; and a play, "Queen by the Grace of God," was exceptionally well given.

Miss Mary E. Williams was salutatorian of the class, and she cordially and in well chosen words greeted the guests of the afternoon and bade them a hearty welcome.

Miss Edith A. Potena was the valedictorian, and she in her remarks compared the commencement of her classmates and herself into the world, following the completion of their high school days, to that of Lindbergh's flight across the Atlantic; stressing the similarity of their groping and striving toward their ideals and goals through the unknown as he did toward his, and hoping for success in their undertakings, just as he accomplished his.

Rev. Joseph E. Murphy, in a humorous strain and also with many well spoken words of advice, conferred the honors upon the graduates. He reminded the young people that the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom; that the battle of life upon which they were beginning would be a personal battle; that everything depended upon their self-restraint and self-denial and that only with the right use of their free will would they be able to conquer.

The medals and awards granted the students were: Francis Bellesi, medal and typing pin; Francis McGee, medal and typing pin; Catherine Armstrong, medal, typing pin and silver bookkeeping pin; Rita Clardy, medal and typing pin; Rose Flanagan, medal and typing pin; Marie McGonigle, medal, typing pin and silver bookkeeping pin; Grace Murphy, medal and typing pin; Edith Potena, medal, 40-word typing pin, 60-word typing pin, gold bookkeeping pin; Catherine Roarty, medal; Lena Verratti, medal and typing pin; Mary Williams, medal, typing pin and gold bookkeeping pin.

Bookkeeping and typing certificates were given to all the thirteen graduates. Marie McGonigle also received a religion medal.

Other students of the school upon whom honors were conferred were: Anna Clotti, bronze bookkeeping pin; Marion Dugan, typing pin; Anna Gleason, bronze bookkeeping pin; Margaret McCahan, bronze bookkeeping pin; Myrtle McCoy, bronze bookkeeping pin, typing pin; Helen Marino, bronze bookkeeping pin; Rose Mulholland, bronze bookkeeping pin; Adeline Rocco, bronze bookkeeping pin; Jennie Slater, silver bookkeeping pin.

LATEST NEWS

Philadelphia, June 15.—Two bandit suspects cornered in a blind alley one-half block from city hall, after a wild chase early today, surrendered and confessed to a series of robberies, police said. Both of the men are from Pittsburgh.

The bandits gave their names as Nicholas Radish and Frank Flago, both 20.

The two were seized in an alley on South Penn Square, after they had attempted to hold up a motorist at 15th and Market streets. They admit, police assert, to hold-ups in New York, Pittsburgh, Baltimore, Atlantic City, Chester.

An unnamed motorist whom they attempted to hold up at 2.30 a. m., shouted for help. Cries attracted two policemen and diners in a nearby restaurant, who gave chase to the alleged bandits. About 1,000 persons participated in the chase, and several shots were fired before the men were captured.

SWIMMING

It is useless to preach of the importance of knowing how to swim, for it is something all know from childhood and that part of the population which cannot swim cannot be prevailed upon to learn by any amount of preaching and admonishing. And yet from now until the autumn frosts many an editorial sermon will have this for its theme.

Every holiday and week-end during the warm months are marred by deaths by drowning, these accidents ranking in number with those on the highways during this part of the year. Drowning deaths are the more tragic because most of them can be traced to carelessness and recklessness.

Not even in the days before the "ol' swimmin' ole" had been supplanted by public and private beaches and pools was bathing as popular as now. Swimming is the most universal sport and the most universal accomplishment in sport. With so many rivers and beaches, pools and tanks inviting overheated humanity to cool relief there is no excuse for being helpless in the water.

The drowning rate is actually very low though it sometimes seems high, especially after a holiday or heat wave, so it should discourage no man, woman or child from enjoying the pleasures and health-giving advantages of this most ancient of sports.

IMPROVING THE RACE

Endowment of worthy families by the state, by the churches and by philanthropic foundations as a means of improving the race, is advocated by a researcher in the field of eugenics. Doubtless he thinks it a new idea. At any rate, he advances it with some show of pride, indicating he fancies himself the inventor or discoverer.

That idea was born back in the dark ages when the first enterprising gentleman set himself up as chief of the tribe. Since then the monarchies of the world have had their royalty and the republics, not to be out done, have their jobholders. This endowment idea is back of a thousand eternal controversies. The poor believe the rich too lavishly endowed. The protest of those who dabble in class government is that the other class is endowed with privilege and power. Today one hears manufacturers, who enjoy tariff protection, and farmers, who have their farm-relief fund, accuse each other of monopolizing all of the endowments handed out by Washington.

The only startling innovation in the new proposal is the limiting of endowments to worthy families. Heretofore political regularity has covered a multitude of sins and nobody has cared a rap about improving the race. Moreover, with the politicians' interest in bigger and better babies being limited to industrial and agricultural infants the improvement of the race will have to rely for a while longer upon Vitamin B and the removal of tonsils and the appendix.

put all those who came into contact with him into touch with the highest and noblest living that any human can conceive. He, by His life revealed God to the world, nay more, He put the world into touch with God. He lived and died as man does, as we ourselves do, but He put into the simplest kind of a life, a splendor of joyousness and of well-doing, the like of which has never been seen on earth. He demonstrated by His life, the supremacy of the spiritual, the unseen, but the real and the eternal.

Thrown upon her own resources, Mary Lou Thurston, beautiful and vivacious orphan, applies for a position as companion to a semi-invalid in the palatial home of Mrs. Lorrimer at Westmill, Connecticut. Mrs. Lorrimer explains the ad should have read "male" as the invalid is her son, Travers, shell-shocked in the war. As Mary Lou is about to leave, Travers enters. He seizes her in his arms, calling her "Delight" and "wife." Then he faints when Mary Lou fails to respond to his caresses. Mrs. Lorrimer persuades Mary Lou to assume the role of Delight Harford, whom Travers claims he married in England, in order to help him regain his health. Mary Lou confides in her friend, Larry Mitchell, young newspaper reporter. Dr. Mathews tells Travers that as Delight was very young at the time of their marriage and since believed him dead, it is only fair to begin all over with friendship.

CHAPTER XV.

DOWNSTAIRS Doctor Mathews was recounting the story he had told Travers to the two women, and Mary Lou was breathing more freely, because her ordeal had been postponed a little longer.

"Do you remember the names of the people with whom Delight Harford lived?" Doctor Mathews asked Mrs. Lorrimer.

She rose and went to a small wall safe, adjusted the combination, and taking out a black notebook, came back to her chair.

"It's all down here," she told them. "I procured every tiniest detail from Travers when he was able to tell me, so that I could instruct and inform the London agents as accurately as possible."

The Little Black Book

For another hour they sat there, reading her notes and discussing them, while Mrs. Lorrimer supplemented them with descriptions given her by her son. And so Mary Lou learned her own story.

Delight Harford had been born in New York of American parents. When she was 4 years old her mother, now Mrs. Von Koch, had taken the child to England on a visit to distant cousins and had remained there. Shortly before the war Mrs. Harford had married a German who she had met while traveling in Switzerland and, on Delight's refusal to live with or even speak to the new stepfather, her mother, now Mrs. Von Koch, had gone to Dresden, leaving Delight a small legacy, enough to pay her board and lodging and a little over. The mother, always a rather casual and light-minded woman, had parted from her daughter without much sorrow. They had always been antagonistic or so Delight had told Travers.

The cousins were named Lucy and Mary Morris and were spinsters of some means, living on Green Street. Delight had continued to live with them. They had both been immersed in war work at the time Travers had met the girl. Lucy, in fact, had gone to France with an ambulance corps and Mary was working as a V. A. D. in a London hospital. Delight herself had worked in a canteen and there young Travers had met her.

The background was thus established, and Mary Lou went over it again and again until she felt she was later perfect.

"Of course," she told Dr. Mathews and Mrs. Lorrimer, "I'll fall down terribly in my part at times. He'll wonder why I haven't heard from the cousins, and don't hear from them while I am here."

"They are dead," announced Dr. Mathews, with a gesture denoting wholesale slaughter, "and that is why you came to America as a companion, hoping to find employment here and perhaps some American relations of your father's."

"How about Delight?" I mean, my mother?" asked Mary Lou, seriously.

"Dead, too!"

Mary Lou chuckled, in spite of herself.

"Oh, no!" she said earnestly, "not quite so funeral, Dr. Mathews. Please!"

"Permanently estranged, then," Mrs. Lorrimer suggested, "she having stayed with the German husband, whom you disliked anyway, and you having such strong English sympathies. How would that do?"

"It will have to do!" sighed Mary Lou.

A little while later Dr. Mathews left. Mrs. Lorrimer and Mary Lou dined alone in the beautiful paneled dining room, and after dinner, while Mrs. Lorrimer went upstairs to say good night to her son, Mary Lou wandered about the formal drawing room and music room and looked at books and pictures and wondered if she would ever become used to such luxury and beauty. Presently Mrs. Lorrimer joined her again.

"He's asleep," she reported, pajamas for you instead of nightgowns!"

"Now why?" asked Mary Lou, interested.

"You'll know when you see the kind I've mentally selected for you."

She took Mary Lou's hands as the girl rose, and bent forward to brush her lips to the fragrant young cheek.

"Sleep well," said Mrs. Lorrimer. "I can't thank you enough. You've given me new hope," she told her. A little later Mary Lou lay in bed and breathed the crisp air which ruffled the curtains at the windows. She was tired and relaxed and drowsy. But she couldn't sleep yet—there was so much to think about.

Modern Cinderella

Cinderella and the beggar maid of King Cophetua—she felt like both of them rolled into one. Tomorrow, tomorrow she faced the reverse side of the fairy tale fabric. Tomorrow she faced certain unreal reality.

"I have to think of it," she told herself, "as my job. Just my job, that's all. I have to give it every-

Mrs. Lorrimer and Mary Lou dined alone in the beautiful paneled dining room.

"And Peter says he ate practically nothing for dinner." She sighed and added, as if her son were still a stubborn five-year-old refusing his spinach and baked apple, "He won't eat much—or properly—at any time."

Mary Lou widened her eyes. Her own appetite was so normal that it was hard for her to understand one whose appetite was not. "He's missing a lot!" announced Mary Lou.

Hospitality Plus

A little later they went upstairs to their adjoining rooms and Mary Lou found, in her own, an exquisite nightgown of pale peach crepe de chine with a matching negligee and slippers. In the bathroom a new tooth brush awaited her and the heavy silver brushes and combs on the bureau had been made ready for her use.

She had undressed and bathed and was toasting her pink toes before the little fire Hilda had lighted in the sitting room when Mrs. Lorrimer knocked and came in, tall and lovely in clinging draperies of mauve and silver.

"Just to say good night. Will you be quite comfortable? I'm afraid the slippers are sizes too large," she deplored, "but it can't be helped tonight. I think I'll have someone sent out with things from the shops in town; I can't wait until we are free to go there ourselves," she laughed, excitement flushing her smooth cheeks with color, "and I've about decided for thing in me. I have to see it through for her sake."

And so she slept, looking, if one could have discovered her dreaming, more like the Sleeping Beauty than like Cinderella.

Mary Lou awoke on the following morning and lay for a moment, drowsily watching the early sunlight creep through the drawn shades and dance across the floor. She had slept well—the dreamless, sound sleep of youth and health—and now she awoke, not to that "where-am-I feeling" but to a complete realization of her surroundings and situation. She awoke, too, to a sense of adventure, a light-hearted determination to see this amazing experiment into which chance had thrust her though to a satisfactory conclusion.

Prosperity and Transportation

Did you ever stop to think that probably the most important feature of modern life, the most necessary service to commerce and industry, is Transportation?

Your trolley cars and buses are the means by which community prosperity is won.

Not so many years ago there was Transportation between Bristol and Langhorne. It was unprofitable, and was discontinued. What business man is there in Bristol but wishes it might be resumed? Trade that came to Bristol from Langhorne and beyond now goes elsewhere.

The buses and trolleys we operate bring customers to the stores. They are as important to the welfare of business houses here as electric lights, telephones, water supply.

Private Transportation is convenient for the individual, but Public Transportation is all-important to the masses of the population that do the buying and keep things going.

Your bus and trolley services ask nothing of the public except the sympathetic understanding and support to which they are entitled.

They are "on the job" eighteen or more hours every day, to the end that Prosperity may be enjoyed, and the Public Necessity and Convenience be served.

Diplomas, Medals, Pins
Awarded at St. Mark's

Honorable mention was made of Ruth Daniels, Marion Dugan, Alma Leinheiser and Randal Yeagle.

George Croner, commander of Bracken Post of the American Legion, then, in behalf of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Legion, and also of the members of the Legion, conferred a medal and certificate upon the two honor students, Virginia McIlvaine and Joseph Wooley. The qualifications upon which Virginia received her honors were excellence in courage, character, service, companionship and scholarship; Joseph received his honors up on the qualification for excellence in courage, honor, service, leadership and scholarship.

Rev. Murray brought the exercises to a close with his remarks. He urged the graduates to live up to the ideals which had been inculcated in them. He bade them keep in their hearts and before their eyes the love of God, and loyalty to their school, parents, priests and teachers, thereby assuring them they could not then be false to any man. Father Murray ended by asking the parents' co-operation in the guidance of their children as regards their recreation, friends, etc., and urged the students to always keep in line with the teachings they had received at St. Mark's.

four men, seated in a large sedan, push the girl from the car and then speed away.

The farmer summoned Trooper

Stewart, of Morrisville, and the girl was taken to the barracks for questioning. She steadfastly refused to give any details, nor would she reveal the identities of the four men.

As a final ironic stroke, she was notified by authorities that Sebastian intends to prosecute her on charges of trespassing and disorderly conduct.

Sebastian said that the occupants of the car were boisterous and acted as if they were under the influence of liquor.

The young victim was stylishly gowned and wore expensive clothing.

Two machines collided with so much noise early last evening on the Lincoln Highway, near Morrisville, that an excited motorist put in an emergency call to a Trenton Hospital.

An ambulance was hurried to the scene with three doctors who found that only one woman was injured badly enough to require medical attention. She suffered a cut on the face that was closed at the scene of the accident with a half-dozen stitches. She was Mrs. Mary McAllister, of 41 Sharpe avenue, Staten Island.

Mrs. McAllister was riding in a car driven by William Wooters, of 37 Wheeler street, West New Brighton, N. Y., when another car driven by George L. Higginrohan, of 5254 Howard street, Philadelphia, swerved from a west-bound line of traffic into the Wooters' car. Both machines were badly damaged, tying up traffic for a quarter of an hour. Highway Patrolman Hohleselder investigated, but made no arrests.

Three persons were injured early yesterday morning when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by a hit and run driver on the Lackawanna Trail, near Doylestown.

Samuel Jaffee, 3114 Page street, Philadelphia, driver of the machine, received lacerations of the forearm. His wife, Rose, sustained cuts and bruises. Miss Anna Sernoff, of 3016 Diamond street, Philadelphia, received severe lacerations of the neck. All were treated at the Doylestown Emergency Hospital and Miss Sernoff was later removed to the Abington Hospital.

Doylestown State Police investigated and learned that the hit-and-run car bore a New Jersey license.

A SON ARRIVES

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Wright, of Brooklyn, at the Harriman Hospital, yesterday.

cape. The cap-shaped head-piece was trimmed with a bandeau of rhinestones and pearls. She carried a shower bouquet of white lilies, carnations and sweet peas.

Miss Lanza looked attractive in a gown of pink satin, made with a close-fitting bodice, V-shaped neck-line and ankle length skirt. The skirt was trimmed with a ruffle of the material and a large satin bow with rhinestones was worn in the back at the waistline. Her gloves, footwear and Greta Garbo horsehair hat trimmed with ribbon, matched her gown and she carried a shower bouquet of pink roses tied with pink satin ribbon.

Miss Della was attired in a light shade of green satin, fashioned with a V-shaped neck-line, sleeveless close-fitting bodice and long full skirt and large satin bow. Miss Della's gloves, slippers, stockings, and hat also matched her gown and her bouquet was pink roses, tied with green satin ribbon.

Miss Emedio was dressed in a gown of orchid satin, also made sleeveless with V-shaped neck-line, close fitting bodice and ankle length skirt. A butterfly satin bow with rhinestones worn at the waistline in the back, was the only trimming on the dress. Slippers, stockings, gloves and hat of the same color, completed her costume and her bouquet was pink roses, tied with an orchid bow.

The flower girl was dressed in a dainty dress of pink crepe-de-chine, made sleeveless and trimmed with three rows of ruffles of the material around the bottom of the skirt. She wore a pink meline bow on her hair, white slippers, pink anklets, and carried a basket of cut flowers.

The ring-bearer was attired in a tuxedo suit and carried the wedding ring on a beautiful white satin heart-shaped pillow edged with wide Spanish lace.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in St. Ann's Hall, 350 attending. Listorti's orchestra furnished the music during the evening. The bride and groom left that evening for a honeymoon trip to Canada. The bride travelled in a light blue crepe dress trimmed with tan lace, black and white kid slippers, black coat with white fur, black and white straw hat, white kid gloves and black handbag. When Mr. and Mrs. Straffe return from their trip, they will reside at the home of the bride's parents.

Badger Oarsmen Are Real Threat

None of the nine crews entered in the intercollegiate rowing regatta on the Hudson River at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 16, is going to suffer the delusion that it has not been in a grueling race with Wisconsin's Huskies (above) battling to uphold the honor of the Middle West. The Badger shell, in its first trial run, went over the four-mile course in 21:32.4-5, good time under the conditions for any boat and especially good for Wisconsin, which has not competed in a race thus far this year. The men are, left to right: Stroke, Cliff Woodward; 7, Zabel; 6, L. Oberdeck (captain); 5, H. Smedal; 4, Ihde; 3, Dutton; 2, Silbernagel; bow, Tessenhardt. Rip Miller is coxswain, and in-sest, Coach Mike Murphy.
